ANCIENT COINS.

- 330 100 Roma. Set of the Aes Grave. These remarkable coins, which were cast, not struck, about B. C. 385, are the earliest coins of Rome, and were made to equal in copper the weight of the Troy pound of 12 oz. or its fractions, but actually weigh slightly less, about in a proportion of  $\frac{3}{4}$  the nominal amount. The unit is the "As," weighing 1 libra, or pound; and, though suffering many diminutions, it continued the basis of the Roman monetary system through the fluctuations of their coinage.

The pieces below the "Semis," or "Half," are marked by dots for the number of ounces they represent, and are called by the corresponding fraction of the pound; thus the piece of four ounces is termed the "triens," or third; the three ounces, the "quadrans," or fourth; the two ounces, the "sextans," but the ounce is termed the "uncia."

The complete set (six pieces, to be sold together, at so much each) may be described as follows:
